

Additional Compensation

Additional compensation is extra compensation for services rendered and paid from an LSU source above the employee's base salary. Additional compensation is earned for performing work outside the scope of the employee's normal duties as reflected on his/her position description form.

An example is an employee who is employed in an administrative position in Accounting Services and also teaches a night class for the College of Business. The money that this employee earns teaching the night class is additional compensation. Summer school is another excellent example of additional compensation for academic professors who have a nine month contract for fall and spring semesters and then teach summer school. The summer school earnings for these academic professors would be additional compensation.

Please see PM-3 and PS-43 for additional information.